

CARY SOLOMON

ARLINGTON ADVISORY BOARD

“Arlington is a consulting company that is dedicated to learning about your business and its culture as a core approach to their engagements. Their process is robust, inclusive and smart. They find candidates who fit the profile and add value. More than that, they leave the company, the management team and the board more engaged, clear and excited about their future and their new leaders. I am proud to be a member of Arlington’s Advisory Board and hope to add value and insight as an ambassador into the innovative life science and health technology, real estate, and the non-profit and community building sectors of their business.”

Cary Solomon, Managing Partner, Seeker Labs and President & Chief Executive Officer of Next Property Group is an Arlington Partners Advisory Board Member. Seeker Labs creates world-class innovation facilities to power Canadian life science and health technology innovation. Seeker Labs’ high-performance properties are purpose-built from the ground up. They provide innovators with the optimal environment needed to create the continuous cycle of research and commercial success to strengthen Canada’s science ecosystem.

Cary is a well-known real estate executive who has spent most of his thirty-year career in the development, management and construction areas of the real estate industry. After graduating from the Ivey School of Business, Cary joined a privately owned real estate development company and led its expansion into the high-rise, commercial office and retail sectors. Within a twelve-year period, he constructed and renovated some eight million square feet in both the Canadian and U.S. markets. Cary was also the Founder and Chief Executive Officer of Quartet Service Corporation, a commercial real estate centric technology service company that manages desktops and communications systems for small and mid-sized business with offices in Toronto, Chicago, Dallas and New York.

Cary is an entrepreneur and a leader known in board, real estate and technology industries in Canada and the U.S. as a consensus-builder around board tables across the private, public and non-profit sectors. Over the last ten years, Cary has successfully led Next Property Group in acquiring, renovating and repositioning older industrial properties as repurposed space for businesses in the digital age. As an Arlington Partners Advisory Board Member, Cary is an ambassador for Arlington and provides thought leadership and industry insights to Arlington’s Life Sciences, Health Technology, Real Estate, Board, CEO and Non-Profit practice areas.

An active member of the non-profit and philanthropic community, Cary is served as Building Chairman of the Renewal Project at Holy Blossom Temple, the largest renovation of a Synagogue in Canadian history. A visionary, Cary is inspired to create innovative properties across Canada. He has a keen understanding of development, construction, leasing and project and stakeholder management. As a CEO, he has a creative and entrepreneurial approach to developing spaces that are both interesting and purposeful for the community and Canada’s science ecosystem.

Cary earned his HBA from the Ivey Business School at the University of Western Ontario.
