

HARRY SOLOMON

“I believe the energy created by great leaders is the catalyst for organizational transformation. Great leaders harness the energy of those around them to increase team and organization performance. Arlington brings energy and innovation to the search process and generates incredible outcomes.”

Harry runs a Financial and Strategic consulting firm for small to medium businesses across Canada and the United States. His cross-functional approach to financial strategy and management has helped scale several businesses across diverse industries including tech, ag-tech, real estate and more. He balances a creative/analytical approach to modern corporate finance with a focus on value creation.

Since the Company’s inception, he has served as Arlington’s Director of Marketing and Information Systems. He brings a strong and varied background in data analytics, media, marketing and IT to the firm. In his role at Arlington Partners, Harry is accountable for IT workflow and infrastructure, CRM, and marketing and communications, including data analytics.

In his early career as an Analyst for BMO Financial Group, Harry undertook data analytics and modeling to help meet cost reduction goals and identify new savings opportunities. He spearheaded the application of travel data to create a geoanalytic visualization dashboard featuring historical airfare and hotel price averages across the bank, revealing new areas for cost reduction.

During his university summers at Bensimon Byrne, Harry was an Associate Camera Operator and Video Editor where he performed filming, editing and 2D animation work for clients including Scotiabank, Loblaw, Air Canada, and federal election campaigns resulting in substantial client success and continued business for the agency.

Harry earned his B.Sc. in Chemistry and HBA at Ivey Business School from the University of Western Ontario.
